The seminal second album of Rone is at last back in stock in red-colored double vinyl version. Including Leftfield smash hits 'Bye Bye Macadam', 'Parade' and 'Let's Go'.

The album has made Rone a cult figure in his own country, gracing the cover of one magazine after the other and being saluted by Trax magazine three times in 2012 (Best French Artist, Best French Album and Best Music Video). French music legend Jean Michel Jarre has been effusive in his praise for the young man. His videos for 'Parade' and 'Bye Bye Macadam' have been picked up worldwide. His live performances during Tohu Bohu's tour have developed into a large-scale sound and vision show entitled 'Module', bringing together the various video-makers (including Studio Fünf, Dimitri Stankowicz and Valdimir Mavounia-Kouka) and stage technicians who have played a key part in defining Rone's visual identity. 'Tohu Bohu' also revealed Rone's openness to experimentation, including a hip-hop inspired track with vocals from 'High Priest' from Antipop Consortium ('Let's Go') and a beautiful collaboration with cellist Gaspard Claus ('Icare').

ABOUT RONE :

RONE (otherwise known as Erwan Castex) is one of the most acclaimed French musicians on the electronic scene. He studied film at university and worked on a number of productions whilst pursuing music in his spare time. InFiné came across some of his tracks on the web ('Bora') and got in touch with him. From then on, things went very fast: he released his debut EP (2008), performed his first live show at the Rex Club and released his first album, 'Spanish Breakfast', in 2009. With the release of 'Tohu Bohu' in the autumn of 2012, things reached a whole new high.

Since Tohu Bohu in 2012, Rone has already released two critically-acclaimed new albums: 'Creatures' in 2014 and 'Mirapolis' in 2017. He also released EPs extracts from 'Tohu Bohu', including remixes ('Parade', 'Let's Go' and 'Bye Bye Macadam') and two original EPs ('Apache' in 2014 and 'Vood(oo)' in 2016). He carries on his musical career, collaborating with great names, playing gigs in the whole world and acquiring an ever-growing audience.
