Sometimes we get lucky enough to witness music collaborations that are so genuine and harmonious, almost as they were written on the creative path of an artist.

This is the case for the new soon to be released collaboration signed by Rone, Erwan Castex, and the young acclaimed Haitian-Canadian Mélissa Laveaux, a singer who combines her strong personality and fearless attitude as Black Queer artist to a personal interpretation of Haitian music.

Rone, who in the last decade has released four critically acclaimed albums, joins his forces to Mélissa Laveaux in a track that uplifts the youthful and sensual voice of the singer bringing folk and blues elements to his production. 'Golden Solitude' reveals a territory at the crossroads of experimental hacks and an intimate pop voice, holding the listener in a bittersweet melancholic state that resonates to what we perceive as solitude, in a work that calls out all our dreams. 'Draft 38' instead, has the task to hold that immersive feeling of solitude and brighten it up, framing it in a peaceful and restfulness key.

Cerebral and sensual, it's a piece of explorers, searched without being clutter, where the magic is as much for electronic loops as for analog machines.

The duo met during the PEOPLE artist residency organized by Bon Iver, Bryce Dessner, and the Michelberger Hotel at the Funkhaus Studios in Berlin.
